ABSTRACT

Focusing on women, this annotated bibliography reviews recent research-oriented literature that investigates sex roles. The main concern is the role and place of women in present-day United States society. The literature areas which the bibliography covers are bibliographies and sources, action organizations, media, women's movement, affirmative action, minorities, family, sex roles, sexuality, social psychology, deviance and social control, education, economy, politics, religion, culture, and history. Bibliographies and Sources

Margaret Andersson, Loyola College at Montreal, presently compiling a critical general bibliography on women for the CAUT.

Helen S. Astin, Nancy Suniewick, and Susan Dweck. WOMEN: A BIBLIOGRAPHY ON THEIR EDUCATION AND CAREERS. Human Service Press, Suite 160, 4301 Connecticut Ave., N.W., Washington, D.C. 20008, 1971. The bibliography includes more than 350 abstracts and annotations. Only 16 of the original books or articles were written prior to 1960, and the majority were written or published after 1966.

Dr. Jeanne C. Biggar. BIBLIOGRAPHY ON THE SOCIOLOGY OF SEX ROLES. Department of Sociology, University of Virginia, Charlottesville, Va. 23904. Centers around women studies and the development of possible guidelines for curricular development.

George Cook, Research Liaison Officer, Women's Bureau, Canada Department of Labour, Ottawa, reviewing and compiling the research being done in Canada on women in the labor force. The Women's Bureau has a bibliography, on index cards, of documents and publications that present data on women in the labour force, usually comparable data for women and men. They also keep track as much as possible of federal publications in the areas of health, welfare, education, juridical statistics, manpower, and ethnic minorities that present comparable data on women. Write to George Cook for more information.

Margrit Eichler, Department of Sociology, University of Waterloo, Waterloo, Ontario, compiling a comprehensive bibliography of materials published on Canadian women from 1950 onwards, presuming a grant application will be approved.

ERIC Clearinghouse on Adult Education. CONTINUING EDUCATION OF WOMEN. Current Information Sources, No. 22, December, 1968. Address: 107 Roney Lane, Syracuse, New York 13210. This annotated bibliography dealing with the continuing education of women contains 143 indexed and abstracted entries arranged under the following headings:

1. Sex differences in mental ability and achievement.
2. Social role related interests and needs.
3. Employment related interests and needs.
4. Programs and participation.
5. Women's education in foreign countries.

Most of the documents are dated from 1965-1968.

1. Determine in view of the significant need for well-qualified women in public administration, what schools of public administration and related professional programs are doing to encourage women to enter and later have opportunities for future development in public service. What should be done further?
2. Encourage women to enter into and continue in public service by: (a) identifying current types of opportunities in shortage fields for the foreseeable future; (b) advocating job listings at the Conference and in the Recruiter which will call attention to specific current needs and stimulate applications from well-qualified candidates, both women and men.
3. Prepare fact sheets on Women's Rights in employment practices as well as policies in the public sector.
4. Compile information about the accomplishments and interests of women who are members of ASPA. This information would be centralized at ASPA headquarters, available for use when ASPA committees, commissions are being staffed, program committees seeking suggestions for speakers, outside sources seeking identification of well-qualified women for varied appointments, etc.

CATALYST, 6 East 82nd Street, New York, N.Y. 10028. A non-profit organization dealing with conspicuous loss of training and ability of educated women. As a catalytic agent, it brings together three elements in the wasteful deadlock of available but unused skills:
Women who want to combine family and work
Employers who need the skills they offer
Educators who can help them meet professional requirements
Catalyst has proved, through research, experimentation, and special projects, the validity of its premise that educated family women want to work where they are needed if offered responsible part-time jobs and that their productivity is proportionately greater than the average full-time employee in a similar position.

The National Coalition for Research on Women's Education and Development, Inc. State University of New York, Stony Brook, N.Y. 11790. Co-Directors: Joseph Katz, Director of Research for Human Development and Educational Policy SUNY; and Esther M. Westervelt, Ed. D., R. D. 1, Box 206, Goshen, N.Y. 10924.
The coalition is a membership organization with the following purposes:
1. To provide constant and full communication among its members on research and program experimentation pertinent to women's education and to relay information to a broader public.
2. To collect available research findings from the behavioral and biological sciences and from program experimentation and evaluation concerning the effect of women's education on women's development.
3. To generate needed new research in the behavioral and biological sciences and in program experimentation and evaluation by member institutions, through contracts with qualified agencies and individuals, and by the coalition staff.
Three major priorities for initial stages of operation:
1. Establishment of an information storage and retrieval service on research pertaining to women;
2. Establishment of a data bank on clientele and programs in the two major recent innovations in women's education--continuing education and women's studies;
3. A series of regional conferences (that may be jointly sponsored with institutions which are members of the coalition) to bring together practitioners in women's higher and continuing education and researchers from a variety of disciplines whose research interests suggest that they may make a significant contribution to research in the Coalition's area of interest.

Institutional memberships are $5.00 for the first year of operation. For information regarding institutional memberships, contact either of the co-directors.

Include the expanded role of unmarried women in Hong Kong economy and youth culture which conflicts with their status in the tightly organized family of orientation, family of procreation. It is hypothesized that among other causes of rising marriage age, that marriage is less desirable because women are reluctant to give up these opportunities.

Will appear in FEMALE AND MALE IN LATIN AMERICA, Ann Pescatello, Editor, University of Pittsburgh Press, 1973. Deals with the attempts of the Castro regime to raise the status of Cuban women. It discusses the situation of women in pre-Castro Cuba, the changes in their status, and concludes with a discussion of some of the difficulties involved in the attempt to modernize the role of Cuban women.

Elena S. H. Yu. Sociology Department, University of Notre Dame, Indiana 46556. ACHIEVEMENT MOTIVATION STUDY OF CHINESE MALES AND FEMALES. Past studies on achievement motivation have been based on western socio-historical context and disproportionately focused on males. This study is an attempt: (1) to compare Chinese achievement motivation with data collected in this country; (2) to contrast and analyze the motivation characteristics of Chinese males vis-a-vis Chinese females. Estimated date of completion: June, 1973.
